The rooms at present under construction include 3 Sunday School rooms, a kitchen and a furnace room.

The wheat crop seems to be very good at this time. I understand that C. C. Harvey and brother have a large new combine, ready to begin harvesting as soon as the wheat is ripe. The combine, in use only a few seasons in this country is perhaps the most useful, as well as the profitable harvesting machine in use. It not only harvests wheat, oats, rye, etc., but it saves all kinds of clover, beans, etc with a minimum of labor and waste.

What to Do

BY PHYLLIS BELMONT

An idea for an unusual form of entertainment is a breakfast.

Invite your "gang" to come home with you "after the club dance" or "after the show" for breakfast. You may keep your menu simple or have it as elaborate as you care to.

If the dance has lasted late, your guests will probably be hungry, so give them scrambled eggs, bacon, hot toast and coffee. You can prepare that in a hurry.

However, if you are having them in after the show, the hour will be earlier and I would suggest you serve them chicken in pattie shells, or club con carne, or any of your favorite substantial supper dishes.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D.
Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for June 14

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

SUNDAY: THE RISEN CHRIST AND HIS DISCIPLES

LESSON TEXT—Luke 24:33-48.
GOLDEN TEXT—Ye are witnesses of these things.—Luke 24:48.

The glory and gladness of the resurrection morning drove back the darkness of the tomb and replaced the disciples' sadness with holy gladness. God's message to His people is one of assurance and hope. The night may be dark, but the dawn will surely come.

Two of Jesus' disciples had been walking sadly along the road to Emmaus when suddenly a stranger was with them, telling them what the Scriptures taught about the Christ—His sufferings and His glory. Their hearts burned strangely within them (Luke 24:32), but they did not recognize Him until He broke the bread of their evening meal—and then He was gone.

But now they had a joyous message which sent them hurrying back to Jerusalem to the eleven who had gathered behind locked doors to discuss the reports which had also come to them of His resurrection. And suddenly—

I. "Jesus Himself Stood in the Midst" (vv. 33-43).

What a blessed and conclusive confirmation of their report. He, their beloved Lord and Master, stood there before them, alive and speaking His tender message of "Peace."

The disciples, however, were bewildered and slow to believe. Observe how kind and patient He was with these frightened and unbelieving men. And note what a splendid testimony it is to the truth of the resurrection that they who knew Him best expected proof before they believed.

Before we condemn them for lack of faith let us ask ourselves if we would have done better, and let us be thankful that their hesitation made assurance doubly sure. He was really there—alive. Partaking of food (which He did not need), and giving them opportunity to touch His body, He demonstrated the reality of the resurrection.

He next gave them a sure foundation for faith.

II. "Then Opened He Their Understanding" (vv. 44, 45).

This He did that they might "understand the scriptures." Their minds had become confused and He literally "disentangled" them. We need to have the knots and kinks taken out of our thinking about God's Word. Then we too will understand.

Dealing with the entire Old Testament (divided by the Hebrews into law, prophets and psalms), He thus gave it His endorsement. Men may deny, but Jesus approved the Scriptures of the Old Testament—and we are ready to take His word. "All things must be fulfilled" is His statement concerning Himself. There is our Lord's guarantee that the promises of His second coming, and all that is associated with it, as well as with His future reign, will be fulfilled.

This time of fellowship with the Lord around the Word of God was strengthening to their faith, but it had another purpose. The blessings of God are not for our own satisfaction alone, for it is His will that there be—

III. "Repentance Preached in His Name" (vv. 46-48).

There is a message to go out through His disciples to all nations. He died for the sins of the world. He arose for the justification of those who believe. There is remission of sin for those who in repentance and faith turn to Him.

Fellowship with Christ and an understanding of His Word which does not result in aggressive witness for Him is quite useless. We meet Him and study His Word not only that we may grow in grace, but that we may be witnesses to all nations.

To be a witness involves knowledge of a fact, to the truth of which the individual can bear testimony. The disciples were called to be witnesses, "not speculators, philosophers, moralists or legislators. They had neither to argue nor to dissertate, nor to lay down rules for conduct, nor to ventilate their own fancies. They were witnesses, and their business was to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth" (Alexander Maclaren).

The Christian by life possibly more than by word is to "adorn the doctrine of God," as Paul put it (Titus 2:10), commending it to those round about him. Observe that such a witness is to start right at home, "beginning at Jerusalem" (v. 47).

It may be difficult in our times to send witnesses to distant lands, for ships are busy carrying the men and implements of war. But right in your Jerusalem there is a spiritual need, in your little town or rural community, in the city where you live, in your home, office, shop, or school. You who read this who are in the service of the country will find a "Jerusalem" in your camp or on your ship.

Looky! Looky! A Sugarless Cookie!

PASS up the sugar bowl and heat up the oven, for you don't need that precious sweet stuff to make the brand new sugarless cookies that have been created, tried and tested in the Rumford Kitchens. They're sweet and simple, and since sugar tends to mask ingredient flavors, Rumford being an all-phosphate baking powder leaves no after taste in sugarless recipes. Here is the Lasie recipe and its four flavorful variations:

Sugarless Cookies

2½ cups sifted flour
1 teaspoons Rumford Baking Powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1¼ cups honey
1 egg, well beaten
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Sift together flour, Rumford Baking Powder and salt. Cream shortening; add honey slowly and cream until fluffy. Stir in well-beaten egg and vanilla. Add sifted dry ingredients, a little at a time, blending well after each addition. Drop by teaspoonfuls on lightly greased cookie sheet and bake in a moderately hot oven (425°F.) for 12 to 15 minutes. Yield: about 4 dozen cookies.

VARIATIONS

Chocolate Drop Cookies: Add ½ cup grated unsweetened chocolate to creamed shortening mixture before adding sifted dry ingredients.

Nut Drop Cookies: Add ½ cup chopped nut meats to creamed shortening mixture before adding sifted dry ingredients.

Orange Drop Cookies: Add 2 teaspoons grated orange rind and ¼ teaspoon orange flavoring to cookie batter in place of vanilla.

Fruit Drop Cookies: Add ½ cup raisins, chopped figs or prunes to creamed shortening mixture before adding sifted dry ingredients.

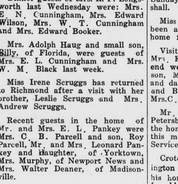
LITTLE STORIES FOR BEDTIME

by Thornton W. Burgess

GRANDFATHER FROG KEEPS ON

Grandfather Frog is old and wise
But even age is foolish.
I'm sure you'll all agree with me
His stubbornness was mulish.

THAT his very last day had come Grandfather Frog was sure. He didn't have the least doubt about it. Here he was at the mercy of Bowser the Hound out on the Green Meadows far from the dear, safe Smiling Pool. Every time he looked Bowser flipped him over on his back and danced around him barking with joy. It was great fun for Bowser. Every minute Grandfather Frog expected to feel Bowser's sharp teeth and he grew cold at the thought. When he found that he couldn't get away he just lay still.



"I won't go back to the Smiling Pool until I have seen the Great World," said Grandfather Frog gruffly.

He was too tired and frightened to do much of anything else, anyway.

Now, when he lay still he spoiled Bowser's fun, for it was seeing him jump and kick his long legs that tickled Bowser so. Bowser tossed him up in the air two or three times, but Grandfather Frog simply lay where he fell without moving. "Bow, wow, wow!" cried Bowser in his great deep voice. Grandfather Frog didn't so much as blink his great goggly eyes. Bowser sniffed him all over.

"I guess I've frightened him to death," said Bowser, talking to himself. "I didn't mean to do that. I just wanted to have some fun with him." With that Bowser took one more sniff and then trotted off to try to find something more exciting. You see he hadn't had the least intention in the world of really hurting Grandfather Frog.

Grandfather Frog kept perfectly still until he was sure that Bowser was no where near. Then he gave a great sigh of relief and crawled under a big mullein leaf to rest and think things over.

"Chugarums, that was a terrible experience; it was indeed!" said he to himself shivering at the very thought of what he had been through.

"Nothing like that ever happened to me in the Smiling Pool. I've always said that the Smiling Pool is a better place in which to live than all the rest of the Great World and now I know it. The question is, what had I best do now?"

Now right down in his heart Grandfather Frog knew the answer. Of course he best thing to do was to go straight back to the Smiling Pool as fast as he could. But Grandfather Frog is stubborn. Yes, sir, he certainly is stubborn. And stubbornness is often just another name for foolishness. He had told Jerry Muskrat that he was going out to see the Great World. Now, if he went back Jerry would laugh at him.

"I won't do it!" said Grandfather Frog.

"What, won't you do?" asked a voice so close to him that Grandfather Frog made a long jump before he thought. You see at the Smiling Pool he always jumped at the least hint of danger, and because one jump always took him into the water he was always safe. But there was no water here and that jump took him right out where anybody passing could see him. Then he turned around to see who had startled him so. It was Danny Meadow Mouse.

"I won't go back to the Smiling Pool until I have seen the Great World," replied Grandfather Frog gruffly.

"You won't see much of the Great World if you jump like that every time you get a scare," said Danny, shaking his head. "No, sir, you won't see much of the Great World, because one of these times you'll jump right into the claws of old Whitetail the Marsh Hawk, or his cousin Redtail, or Reddy Fox. You take my advice, Grandfather Frog, and go straight back to the Smiling Pool. You don't know enough about the Great World to take care of yourself."

But Grandfather Frog was stubborn and set in his ways and nothing that Danny Meadow Mouse could say changed his mind in the least. "I started out to see the Great World and I'm going to keep right on," said he.

"All right," said Danny at last, "if you will I suppose you will. I'll go a little way with you just to get you started right."

"Thank you," replied Grandfather Frog. "Let's start right away."
